Hulk Marketing: Animated Video Concept

"The Pop-Up Book" · 30 seconds · paper-craft stop-motion style animation · 9:16 (with 1:1 and 16:9 cuts)

What We Saw on Pinterest

- Paper cut-out and stop-motion animation boards are full of layered paper landscapes, pop-up scenes, paper cities and hands moving pieces into frame. It feels handmade and warm, which makes people stop scrolling.
- Brands use the style to tell a journey or process (Moleskine and Toyota are well-known examples) because each layer of paper can reveal the next step.
- Clean versions use a dark background with cream paper and one accent colour, which fits Hulk's forest, cream and green perfectly.
- Almost no marketing agencies use paper craft; most stick to flat vector or UI animation, so this stands apart.

The Idea

A business's growth told as a pop-up book. A hand opens a green book, and each page pops up a paper scene showing one step of Hulk's real working process, taken word for word from the "Good work starts with a good process" section of the website:

1. Get to the real brief.
2. Make the thinking tangible.
3. Build. Refine. Release.
4. Keep making it better.

A tiny paper shop grows page by page, from a quiet little shopfront to a busy, thriving business. On the last page the book closes and the cover shows the Hulk Marketing logo embossed in green: "Your move. Let's make it matter." (the website's own closing line).

The Hook (first 2 seconds)

Visual: A hand drops a thick green book onto a desk with a thud and flips it open.

On-screen text: Every business has a story. Most never get past page one.

Alternative hooks to test:

- "Your business deserves a better next chapter."
- "This is how we turn a small shop into a brand."

Who It's For

- Ambitious UK small business owners and founders who want to grow but don't know what the process of working with an agency looks like.

- It builds trust by showing exactly how Hulk works, step by step, before they get in touch.

Style

- Handmade paper-craft look: layered cut paper with real depth and soft shadows, visible paper texture, pop-up folds and pull tabs.
- Stop-motion feel: animated "on twos" (12 frames per second) with tiny natural wobbles so it feels physically made.
- Colours: forest green desk and background (#111A16), cream paper for most pieces (#F4F2E9), ink lines (#20392E), Hulk green (#9DEF69) for the book cover and key highlights only.
- Type: chapter titles printed on paper strips in Inter Tight; small labels in Hanken Grotesk. No handwritten fonts.
- A real-looking hand turns the pages, which helps the handmade illusion.

Scene by Scene

Scene 1 · 0:00–0:03 · The book (hook)

Visual: Top-down view of a dark desk. A hand drops a green hardback book with a thud and flips it open. A tiny, plain paper shopfront pops up, quiet and a little lonely.

On-screen text: Every business has a story. Most never get past page one.

Sound: Book thud, paper rustle, the soft creak of a pop-up unfolding.

Scene 2 · 0:03–0:09 · Chapter 1: Get to the real brief

Visual: The hand turns the page. A paper magnifying glass slides across the little shop on a pull tab, revealing hidden layers underneath: who the customers are, what makes the shop special, where it wants to go. Small paper notes fold out of the ground.

On-screen text: 01 · Get to the real brief.

Sound: Page turn, a pull-tab slide, paper notes flicking open.

Scene 3 · 0:09–0:15 · Chapter 2: Make the thinking tangible

Visual: Next page. Rough pencil sketches on paper lift off the page and fold themselves into a finished brand: a new shop sign with a logo, colour swatches fanning out, a paper phone showing a fresh website.

On-screen text: 02 · Make the thinking tangible.

Sound: Pencil scratch, paper folding with a satisfying snap.

Scene 4 · 0:15–0:21 · Chapter 3: Build. Refine. Release.

Visual: Next page: a full paper high street pops up. The newly branded shop sits in the middle. A green paper map pin springs up above it, a paper billboard flips to show its ad, and tiny paper people on sliding strips start walking towards the door.

On-screen text: 03 · Build. Refine. Release.

Sound: Three quick pops (pin, billboard, people), then footsteps on paper.

Scene 5 · 0:21–0:25 · Chapter 4: Keep making it better

Visual: Last page. The shop has grown into a bigger, busier store with a queue outside. Behind it, paper hills rise layer by layer in a gentle upward curve, and a small green flag pops up on the highest one.

On-screen text: 04 · Keep making it better.

Sound: Layered paper sliding up, a cheerful little "ding" on the flag.

Scene 6 · 0:25–0:30 · The cover (call to action)

Visual: The hand closes the book. The camera moves in on the green cover, where the HULK MARKETING logo is embossed. Underneath, a paper label slides out with the call to action.

Voice-over (optional)

Warm, storytelling British voice, like someone reading a bedtime story to a business owner:

"Every business has a story. Most never get past page one.
So we start with the real brief.
We make the thinking tangible.
We build, refine, and release.
And we keep making it better.
Your move. Let's make it matter. Get your free audit from Hulk Marketing."

Music and Sound

- A gentle, hopeful acoustic track (light piano, plucked guitar, soft percussion) that grows fuller with each chapter.
- Rich paper sound design: page turns, folds, pull-tab slides and pops. These handmade sounds sell the style.

Production Notes

- Two ways to make it: (a) real stop motion with cut paper and a camera on a rig, or (b) digital paper craft in After Effects, Cinema 4D or Blender with scanned paper textures and real shadows. Option (b) is faster and easier to change.
- Keep every scene to one main pop-up action so it reads quickly on a phone.
- Chapter titles must be large and readable on mobile; keep them on screen for at least 2 seconds each.
- No real third-party logos on the paper billboard or map pin; keep them generic.
- Cutdown (15 seconds): the hook, Chapters 1 and 3 only, then the cover.
