It Comes Back

A salam post for the British Muslim Heritage Centre's Community Open Days · single image · 1080×1350 (4:5) · built fully in vector, no AI imagery

CONCEPT

The idea

The greeting "As-salamu alaykum" means "peace be upon you", and its reply, "Wa alaykum as-salam", sends the same peace straight back. The post turns that exchange into one simple emblem: a gold ring of words. The greeting runs over the top, the reply runs underneath, and two small arrows close the loop, like the "sync" icon everyone knows from their phone. In the middle sits one word: سَلَام, peace.

The headline does the rest: "Say salam. It comes back." Under the ring is the Prophet's ﷺ instruction from Sahih Muslim 54, "Spread salam among yourselves", and an open invitation to the place where BMHC does exactly that every month: its Community Open Day, held on the last Sunday of every month, where "everyone is welcome".

HEADLINE

"Say salam.
It comes back."

CALL TO ACTION

"Come and say salam. Community Open Day."

Why it works

- Everyone gets it in a second. Muslims recognise the greeting and its reply. Anyone else learns what it means from the ring itself, so the post builds the bridge it talks about.
- It speaks to BMHC's outreach. BMHC's outreach work is about "Building Bridges of Understanding, Respect, and Unity". The open day is the most open door it has: tours, exhibitions, Q&A, family activities and tea with the team.
- The comments do the concept. The caption asks people to leave a salam, and BMHC replies to every one. Each reply proves the headline, and every exchange lifts the post in the feed.
- It stands apart on the grid. After the ivory "Still Going" card, this is a deep green emblem in gold, so BMHC's feed alternates light and dark.

What Pinterest showed

Logged-out search grids for "assalamualaikum typography poster", "interfaith open day poster design" and "Islamic greeting card minimal design" (screenshots only; we didn't get past the login prompt).

What's everywhere (we avoid it)

- The greeting as ornate calligraphy that many people can't read, or as bubbly cartoon lettering with flowers. It's always one-way: the reply never appears.
- Open-day posters that mix the symbols of several faiths into one badge. We let the welcome speak for itself.

What we borrow

- Bold, oversized poster type and a single strong date line from the open-day posters.
- Gold on deep green and minimal geometry from the greeting-card results.
- Circular text badges, used here to show the loop.

LAYOUT PREVIEW

A layout sketch at 30% of the real size, built with the real logo file. The final post is drawn in vector at 1080×1350; numbers in the notes are full-size pixels.

1. Logo. The real white BMHC logo file, top left, about 220 px wide.
2. Tag. "Community Open Day" in a thin gold outline pill, 25 px caps, so the subject reads first.
3. Headline. "Say salam." in ivory and "It comes back." in gold, Poppins Bold, about 90 px.
4. The loop. "AS-SALAMU ALAYKUM" runs over the top in ivory, with "peace be upon you" inside it. "WA ALAYKUM AS-SALAM" runs underneath in gold, with "and upon you, peace". The big lines are 30 px caps and the meanings 25 px. A thin gold track with arrowheads at 3 and 9 o'clock turns it into one clockwise loop.
5. Centre. سَلَام in Amiri, gold, about 110 px, with "PEACE" in small caps under it.
6. The hadith. أَفْشُوا السَّلَامَ بَيْنَكُمْ in Amiri at about 43 px, then "Spread salam among yourselves." at 28 px and the source line at 25 px. Flat and calm, never on the curve.
7. Call to action. "Come and say salam." at 43 px, then the open-day line and the address at 25–26 px, ending about 80 px above the logo bars.

VISUAL DIRECTION

- Look: a calm, premium emblem, like a seal or a medal. One idea and lots of deep green space.
- Background: BMHC deep green #122F2A, with a soft lighter glow behind the ring and a very faint eight-pointed-star lattice (about 5% opacity).
- Colour: ivory #EFEEEA for the greeting and headline, gold #DD9933 for the reply, arrows and Arabic, and light sage #C9D3CF for small lines (about 10:1 contrast on the green). The logo's four bars run along the bottom edge.
- Type: Poppins, BMHC's website font, for all English. Amiri for the Arabic and for ﷺ, which Poppins doesn't include. Ring caps are tracked open (about +15%).
- How to make it: everything is vector. Build it in Figma or Illustrator: text on two circular paths, a thin track with two arrowheads, the lattice and the type. No AI image is needed, so there's nothing to fix and no AI label.
- Arabic: type it from the separate text file, never copy it from this PDF, and keep the hadith line flat, not on the curve.
- Safe area: keep everything at least 60 px from the edges. The profile grid crops 4:5 posts to 3:4, about 34 px off each side, and the ring stays well clear.
- Story version (1080×1920): the same layout with more green above and below; keep text out of the top 250 px and bottom 340 px.

Alt text

A deep green post with the BMHC logo. Large text reads "Say salam. It comes back." A gold ring of words reads "As-salamu alaykum, peace be upon you" over the top and "Wa alaykum as-salam, and upon you, peace" underneath, with arrows making a loop around the Arabic word salam, meaning peace. Below: the hadith "Spread salam among yourselves", from the Prophet Muhammad, peace be upon him, in Sahih Muslim 54, and "Come and say salam. Community Open Day, last Sunday of every month, everyone welcome. bmhc.org.uk/community-open-days."

Caption (Instagram)

Say salam. It comes back.

"As-salamu alaykum" means "peace be upon you". The reply, "wa alaykum as-salam", sends the same peace straight back.

The Prophet ﷺ taught that we will not truly believe until we love one another, and showed us the way: "Spread salam among yourselves."
(Sahih Muslim 54)

Whoever you are, come and say salam. Our Community Open Day is on the last Sunday of every month: guided tours, our exhibitions, Q&A, family activities and tea with our team. Everyone is welcome.

Islamic guidelines check

- No people, faces or figures, and no symbols of other faiths. The welcome is in the words.
- The hadith is quoted exactly. The Arabic phrase is copied from Sahih Muslim 54 and stays flat and calm. Only the greeting itself, which is everyday speech and not scripture, curves around the ring.
- Respect: ﷺ follows the Prophet's name on the image and in the caption. The emoji sits on its own line at the end, away from the hadith.
- Nothing is promised beyond what BMHC's open-day page says.

Before posting

- Ask BMHC's imam to approve the Arabic, the English line "Spread salam among yourselves" (our short rendering of the hadith's Arabic phrase on the post) and the spellings "As-salamu alaykum" / "Wa alaykum as-salam".
- Confirm the open day: the website says "held on the last Sunday of every month" but gives no times or booking details (the next two are 29 November and 27 December 2026). Add the time to the pinned comment.
- Check the Instagram bio link points to bmhc.org.uk/community-open-days, and have someone ready to reply to every salam in the first few hours.

Sources

- The hadith: Sahih Muslim 54 (Abdul Baqi 54a; Book of Faith, in-book Book 1, Hadith 101), narrated by Abu Hurairah, checked against hadith-api ara/eng-muslim no. 194. Siddiqui's full translation: "…Should I not direct you to a thing which, if you do, will foster love amongst you: (i.e.) give currency to (the practice of paying salutation to one another by saying) as-salamu alaikum."
- bmhc.org.uk/interfaith: "Building Bridges of Understanding, Respect, and Unity"; open days "welcoming people of all faiths and backgrounds".
- bmhc.org.uk/community-open-days: "Held on the last Sunday of every month"; "Everyone is welcome — individuals, families, schools, organisations, and faith groups"; tours, exhibitions, Q&A, family activities and "tea, snacks, and friendly conversations". Both pages checked on 31 October 2026.
