Hulk Marketing: Static Post Concept

"First Impression" · 1080 × 1350 (4:5) · Instagram, Facebook, LinkedIn

What We Saw on Pinterest

- Split-screen ads are a strong, popular format: one image cut down the middle into two versions of the same thing (ordinary vs. better, before vs. after, "your phone" vs. "our phone").
- The best ones keep the same subject on both sides, so the only thing that changes is the difference the brand makes. The viewer gets it instantly.
- The "your problems / our solution" layout also appears in agency ad boards, but usually as cluttered text. We can do it visually instead.

The Idea

A hand holds a phone showing a local business's online listing, split straight down the middle. On the left, the listing is what most small businesses look like online: no photos, no reviews, no website, dull and easy to scroll past. On the right, it's the same business after Hulk: a great shopfront photo, five-star reviews, "Open now" and a bright "Book now" button. Same business. Different first impression. Every owner instantly asks themselves: which side am I?

It speaks directly to Hulk's local services: SEO, Local Maps Marketing, Reputation Management and Website Design.

Visual

- One real photo of a hand holding a smartphone upright, in the centre of the frame.
- A clean vertical split line runs down the middle of the whole post, through the phone.
- Left side (without Hulk): background in a flat, muted grey-beige; phone screen shows a plain listing with a grey empty photo box, "No reviews yet", "No website" and faded text.
- Right side (with Hulk): background in forest green #111A16; phone screen shows the same business name with a warm shopfront photo, five gold stars, "Open now" in green and a green "Book now" button.
- The phone screen is a simple, generic mock-up designed in Figma or Photoshop. Do not use Google's logo or interface; keep it brand-neutral.
- No other props, icons or decoration.

Photo / AI Prompt

For the hand and phone, use a real photo or this AI prompt, then add the split background and screen designs in Photoshop:

"Close-up photo of a hand holding a modern smartphone upright in front of a plain background, phone screen blank and facing the camera, natural skin tones, soft studio light, sharp focus, centred, realistic, no text."

Layout (1080 × 1350)

1. Headline at the top, across both halves: Inter Tight 900, about 90 px, two lines. Ink #20392E on the left half, cream #F4F2E9 on the right (the colour switches at the split line).
2. Two small labels above the phone: "Ignored" on the left and "Chosen" on the right, Hanken Grotesk 600, 34 px, in caps.
3. The hand and phone in the centre: the focal point.
4. Supporting line under the phone: Hanken Grotesk 400, 34 px.
5. CTA button on the right half: green #9DEF69 pill, forest text, Hanken Grotesk 600, 34 px.
6. Logo, small, bottom right.

Rules: two fonts only, minimum text size 34 px, 80 px margins, no more than about 25 words on the post.

Colours

- Muted grey-beige #D9D6CC: left half (the "ignored" side)
- Forest #111A16: right half (the Hulk side)
- Cream #F4F2E9 and ink #20392E: text
- Hulk green #9DEF69: "Open now", the "Book now" button on the screen and the CTA button only

Copy

Headline: Same business. Different first impression.

Labels: Ignored / Chosen

Supporting line: Customers judge you online before they ever walk in.

CTA button: Get my free audit ↗

Alternative headlines:

- Which one would you call?
- Your customers already compared. Did you win?

Caption

Which one would you choose? 👀
Before customers visit, call or book, they look you up. No photos, no reviews and no website means they move on to the next result.
Hulk Marketing helps local businesses get found and get chosen, with SEO, Google Maps, reviews and websites that make a great first impression.
👉 Get your free audit and see what customers see: link in bio.

#HulkMarketing #LocalSEO #SmallBusinessUK #DigitalMarketingUK #ReputationManagement

Alt Text

A hand holding a phone, split down the middle. On the left, a plain business listing with no photos and no reviews, labelled "Ignored". On the right, the same business with a shopfront photo, five stars and a "Book now" button, labelled "Chosen". Text: "Same business. Different first impression." Button: "Get my free audit".

Why It Works

- Instant comparison: understood in one second, no reading needed.
- Personal: every owner checks which side their own business is on.
- One focal point, two fonts, large readable text and no decoration.
- Conversion-focused: the free audit offer answers the question the post raises ("What do customers see when they find me?").

Other Sizes

- Stories (1080 × 1920): same split; headline at the top, phone in the middle, button above the bottom 340 px, plus a link sticker.
- LinkedIn (1:1): crop tighter on the phone; keep the headline and button.
- Carousel option: slide 1 shows only the left half ("Is this you?"), slide 2 reveals the full split.