Organic Fostering: "The Group Chat"

CONCEPT

The idea

A phone screen showing a short text conversation between a teenager in foster care and their foster carer. It's funny, warm and completely ordinary: a mate coming round for tea, a good grade, and an embarrassed "thanks x".

It shows what fostering teenagers really looks like day to day, and it gently challenges the idea that teenagers are "too difficult". Fostering teenagers is one of the types of fostering Organic Fostering offers.

Reference

Pinterest blocks automated browsing, so I couldn't open individual pins. The format draws on the text-message screenshot graphics that are hugely popular on Pinterest and Instagram: people read every bubble, and the punchline lands on the last line.

Why it works

- People read the whole thing. A chat is instantly familiar, and each message pulls the eye to the next.
- The last line lands emotionally ("...thanks x"), which makes people save and share it.
- Lead generation: it speaks to people who are open to fostering older children, a group that often goes unmentioned.
- Engagement: "What's the best text you've ever had from a teenager?" gets easy, funny comments.

Why it's new

Earlier posts covered cultural matching, the types of fostering as a quiz, the spare room and fostering siblings. This is the first post dedicated to fostering teenagers, and the first in a chat-message format.

Visual direction

- A clean phone mock-up in the centre on a soft peach background, slightly tilted, with a gentle shadow.
- The teenager's messages in light grey bubbles; the carer's messages in brand magenta with white text.
- The contact name at the top of the chat reads "Home 🏡".
- The headline sits above the phone in Poppins Bold, plum; the call-to-action line runs along the bottom.
- No photos of children. The words do all the work.

The chat (contact name: "Home 🏡"):

- Teen: can Jay come round for tea? 🍝
- Carer: Course he can. Tea's at 6 👍
- Teen: also I got a B in maths
- Carer: A B!! So proud of you 🎉
- Teen: ok don't make it weird
- Carer: Too late. Cake tonight 🎂
- Teen: ...thanks x

"...thanks x" might be the best text you'll ever get. 🧡

Teenagers in care need what every teenager needs: someone to say yes to tea, cheer the small wins and be there when they're ready to talk.

Fostering teenagers is one of the types of fostering we offer. You'll get full training, your own supervising social worker and advice outside normal hours. It all starts with an informal chat.

Alt text

A phone screen showing a text conversation. A teenager asks if a friend can come for tea and shares that they got a B in maths. The foster carer replies with pride and promises cake, and the teenager replies "...thanks x". The headline reads "Fostering teenagers looks like this."

Story follow-up

Repost to Stories with a quiz sticker: "True or false: you need parenting experience to foster a teenager." Reveal the answer, "False: no previous experience needed", with the enquiry link.

COPY CHECK

- Fostering teenagers, full training, a supervising social worker, advice outside normal hours, no previous experience needed, the informal first conversation and "a place to belong" all come from Organic Fostering's website and materials.
- The chat is an illustrative example, not a real conversation, and uses no real names or details.
