Bodyrade: “Since 7am.”

Animated video concept · 3D product animation with motion-graphics type · Instagram Reels, TikTok and Facebook · 9:16, 27 seconds · plus a 4:5 feed cut

CONCEPT

The idea

Plenty of people load their pre-workout in the morning and train after work. This animation shows that day from inside the gym bag. A top-down camera looks into an open bag at 07:00: a plain shaker with powder already in the bottom, and the Mixology Bottle with its capsule loaded. A big clock rolls through the day while the light through the zip changes from cold morning blue to warm afternoon orange.

Your website explains why that matters: once exposed to air, light or moisture, “even just being stored at the bottom of a shaker bottle inside a gym bag”, ingredients “begin to degrade”. The video doesn’t show decay. It shows readiness: the shaker has sat open to the bag all day, while the capsule is still sealed at 17:00. Before training the bottle lifts out into your navy studio and takes its ice-cold water; twenty minutes before training you twist, release and shake. The end line is yours too: Activate at the moment of use.

HOOK · FIRST 4 SECONDS

In your gym bag. Since 07:00.

END LINE

Activate at the moment of use.

What I found

- Website (bodyrade.com, checked 31 Oct 2026): the home page explains the problem (“degradation starts the moment they leave their original packaging”) and the routine: “load the capsule before the day ahead”, add cold water, then “twist and release the capsule contents into the water when ready”; the supplements page says “Take one serving 20 minutes before training”. Its lines include “Activate at the Moment of Use”, “Fresh every time” and “ONLY MIX IT FRESH”. Every Register button goes to bodyrade.com/pages/contact, the flavours are still “coming soon”, and each flavour page carries a caffeine warning.
- Your earlier concepts: “Twist. Drop. Fresh.” freezes the moment of use and “Locked In Fresh.” shows the engineering. Neither shows time passing, which is the whole reason the capsule exists.
- Pinterest (logged-out search grids): supplement 3D animations are almost all a tub or bottle spinning on a coloured backdrop, on fire, or with fruit and pills flying past. “What’s in my gym bag” top-down shots are one of the most pinned fitness formats, because everyone recognises their own bag.

Why it works

- It tells the problem as a story. A clock everyone reads instantly, ticking through a day everyone has lived, makes the hours between loading and drinking something you can see.
- It’s relatable before it’s a product ad. The first three seconds look like a “what’s in my gym bag” video, so people don’t scroll past an ad.
- It teaches the routine. Load in the morning, add water before training, twist twenty minutes before: viewers learn the bottle without an instruction slide.
- Every element lands on its word. The clock, each hazard word, the SEALED pill, the water, the twist and the bloom all appear on the spoken or on-screen word that names them, so it works with sound on or off.

Why it’s new

Your earlier concepts are single frozen moments. This is the first one built on time: the hours between loading the capsule and drinking it, which is where the Mixology Bottle earns its place. It borrows the gym-bag view from Pinterest and skips the spinning tubs, fire and fruit explosions everyone else uses.

STORYBOARD: SIX KEY FRAMES

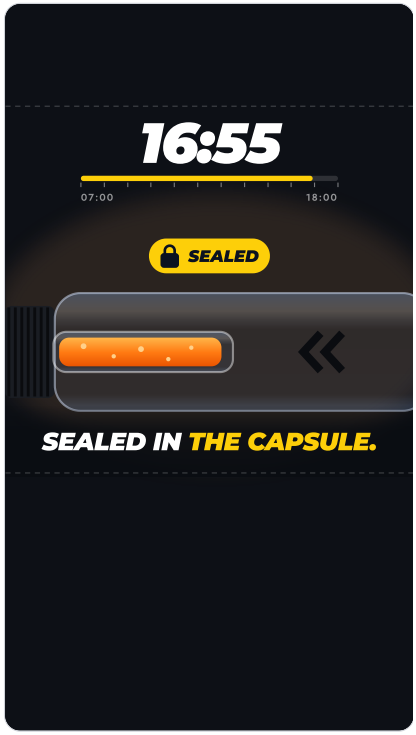

Layout sketches in your colours and type; the final is a 3D render. The dashed lines mark the text-safe area (y = 270 to 1240 px at 1080 × 1920): every word sits between them, clear of the Reels caption area and buttons.

1 · Hook · 0:04
The zip rips open on a top-down view of a gym bag. On “since seven” the clock slams to 07:00 and the day bar appears.

2 · The day · 0:09
Air, light, moisture stamp in as the light changes, and on “all day” the clock rolls on. Both bottles sit untouched.

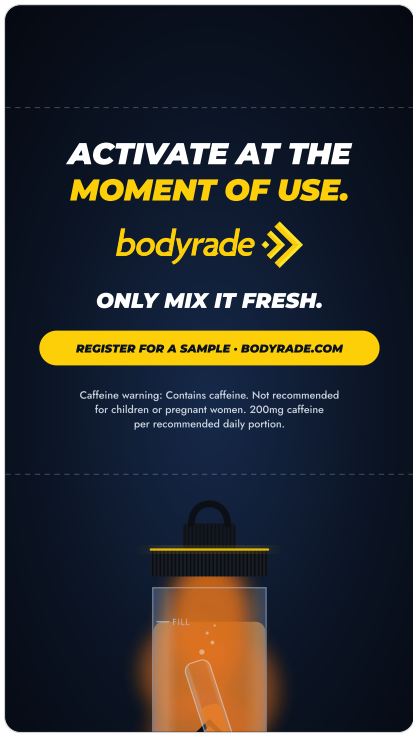

3 · Sealed · 0:13
Push-in on the capsule. On “sealed” a yellow SEALED pill with a padlock clicks on, still sealed at 16:55.

4 · Water · 0:16
At 17:30 the bottle lifts out into the studio. On “cold water” it turns over, the base comes off and water pours in to the line.

5 · Twist · 0:20
At 17:40 the cap twists with a yellow arc. On “release” the capsule drops into the water and the powder blooms out of it.

6 · End card · 0:26
Headline, real logo, ONLY MIX IT FRESH., the sample pill and the full caffeine warning, all inside the safe area.

SCRIPT AND SYNC SHEET

27 seconds at 120 BPM, so every beat change falls on a half-second. 49 spoken words, about 20 seconds at a calm 150 words a minute. The voiceover is optional; the on-screen words work with the sound off. Highlighted words are cues: each element enters on its word.

BEAT	VOICEOVER	ON SCREEN	WHAT MOVES
1 · Hook 0:00–0:04.5	"Your pre-workout's been in your gym bag since seven."	IN YOUR GYM BAG SINCE 07:00.	• 0:00 a zip rips open on a top-down view of a gym bag: a plain shaker with powder in the bottom, and the Mixology Bottle, capsule loaded. • gym bag: the first line types in. • seven: the clock slams to 07:00 and the yellow day bar appears.
2 · The day 0:04.5–0:11	"Air, light, moisture. It's been sitting in all three all day."	AIR. LIGHT. MOISTURE.	• Air, light, moisture: each word stamps in as the light through the zip shifts. • all day: the clock rolls 08:15, 12:30, 15:45, 16:55 and the day bar fills, cold blue to warm orange. Both bottles sit untouched; the shaker stays visibly unchanged.
3 · Sealed 0:11–0:14	"Ours stays sealed in the capsule."	SEALED IN THE CAPSULE.	• Ours: push-in on the capsule; the shaker leaves the frame. • sealed: a yellow SEALED pill with a padlock clicks on.
4 · Water 0:14–0:17	"Before training, add cold water."	17:30 ADD COLD WATER.	• Before training: 17:30; the bottle rises out of the bag into the navy studio. • cold water: it turns over, the base unscrews, ice-cold water pours to the fill line and the base screws back on.
5 · Twist 0:17–0:20.5	"Twenty minutes before training, twist and release."	17:40 TWIST. RELEASE.	• Twenty minutes: the clock lands on 17:40. • twist: the cap turns with a yellow arc; light glows at the collar. • release: the capsule drops into the water and the Orange & Mango powder blooms out of it, as in your capsule video.
6 · Shake 0:20.5–0:23	"Shake. Fresh every time."	FRESH EVERY TIME.	• Shake: the cap twists back tight, then three hard shakes, motion blur, ice clinks. • Fresh every time: the bottle settles, glowing orange, with condensation and a yellow rim light.
7 · End card 0:23–0:27	"Activate at the moment of use. Bodyrade."	ACTIVATE AT THE MOMENT OF USE. ONLY MIX IT FRESH.	• Activate: the headline stamps in above the bottle, with ONLY MIX IT FRESH., the "Register for a sample · BODYRADE.COM" pill and the caffeine warning. • Bodyrade: the real logo slides in, chevrons first.

4:5 feed cut (1080 × 1350, 15 s): beats 1, 3, 5 and 7 (4.5 + 3 + 3.5 + 4 s), cropped from the 9:16 master at y 200–1550 so the clock and every line stay in. The clock jumps from 07:00 to 17:40 and the bottle appears already filled. Voiceover: "Your pre-workout's been in your gym bag since seven. Ours stays sealed in the capsule. Twenty minutes before training, twist and release. Activate at the moment of use. Bodyrade."

Optional caking version (use only if Bodyrade holds test data that supports it): beat 2 voiceover "Air, light, moisture. It starts to degrade the moment it leaves the pack."; on "degrade" the shaker's powder darkens and cakes, with a small "Dramatisation" label.

LOOK, MOTION AND SOUND

- Act 1, inside the bag: a locked-off top-down macro shot. Real fabric, a towel, earbuds case and keys, all unbranded. Time passes through light alone: a beam through the zip that changes angle and colour with the clock.
- Act 2, the studio: your navy set from the brand video: glossy black floor, cold blue rim light, a yellow ring of light at the collar.
- The bottle: tall clear cylinder, wide threaded mouth, printed fill line; one black ribbed collar with the slim capsule tube hanging from it; small black screw cap with carry loop; black screw base; black chevron logo. Check against your CAD.
- The shaker: plain and unbranded, never a competitor. In the main version it stays visibly unchanged all day.
- Type and UI: Montserrat Black Italic (close to the pack lettering) for the clock and headlines, Jost for small text; a yellow day bar and a SEALED pill. Logo yellow #FDCF09, navy, black and the flavour orange.
- Motion: the clock rolls like an odometer; words stamp in with a small overshoot; the move from bag to studio is one continuous crane up as the bottle rises to the lens.
- Sound: a zip rip, a clock tick that speeds up, muffled sounds of each hour from inside the bag (bus brakes, office chatter, a car indicator), a padlock click, water pouring, a cap twist, a soft whoosh on the bloom, ice on the shake, a hit on the logo.
- Music: a minimal electronic track at 120 BPM that stays ticking and restrained until 18:00, then drops on the twist.
- Voice: optional; calm, British, a dry edge. Burn in captions if used.
- How to make it: Cinema 4D or Blender for the bag, bottle and liquid (the bloom as a fluid sim or ink-in-water footage), type in After Effects. Model the bottle from your own render.

- From bodyrade.com: the four steps, "20 minutes before training", "Activate at the Moment of Use", "Fresh every time", "ONLY MIX IT FRESH", "Register for a sample", the formula and the sample link.
- No decay claim in the main version: the shaker stays unchanged and the line is "It's been sitting in all three all day". The caking option is an implied comparative claim (CAP 3.7 and 3.9): use it only with test data.
- Caffeine: word for word from the flavour pages.
- Left out: "No clumping, no potency loss", "airtight", "world's first multi patented" and the site's blood flow, energy and strength claims (UK health-claim rules).
